McDOUGALLS' SHEEP DIP.

McDougalls' non-poisonous sheep dip and cattle dressing, seal specific and insect exterminator on sheep, cattle, horses, dogs, poultry, etc., has been used with great success in this county for several years. It instantly exterminates all ticks, lice and maggots; it is the only true specific for scab, and finely stimulates the growth of the fleece, making its use very profitable. When used in the special strength it also waterproofs the fleeces, thus affording the animals great protection from cold and wet. In the United States, Great Britain and many places abroad it is now generally adopted—having to a large extent displaced the use of tobacco, arsenic, lime and sulphur, and poisonous mixtures. It has important advantages over such dressings, and is more certain in its action. For sale at 12-11. SHELDON'S DRUG STORE.

Sargent was found by two officers in a stable-yard in Boston, and recognizing the officers, he jumped on a low shed and pulled a revolver. The officers began firing at once, putting three bullets into Sargent's legs and compelling him to give up the fight.

The editor of a Florida paper has sent a communication to the President assuring him that the people do not set the laws at defiance, nor do they maltreat the officers of the law, but he insists that the people are persecuted by partisan tribunals, and simply refuse to appear before the courts where they cannot hope for justice.

A CURIOUS PERFORMANCE.

A horse consigned to Dr. Jaquith of Hartford, Ct., and valued at $400, was stolen from a freight car at South Vernon Friday night. The car had just been shifted from the Central Vermont road to the Connecticut River road, and while the train was waiting for "time" some planks were run up to the car door and the horse taken out. A reward of $50 was offered and Saturday the horse and thief were captured near Bennington.

Officers Pike and Nash of Bennington arrested in Woodford, Vt., a supposed horse-thief, who gave the name of David McHolen. The horse, a valuable one, was stolen in Brattleboro, and a telegram informed the officers that the thief had gone toward Bennington. McHolen alleged that he caught the horse on the railroad track at South Vernon, and that he intended to ride the animal to Detroit, Mich., which place he thought was not far distant. The prisoner is in Bennington jail awaiting trial.

The above items from exchanges tell of a singular theft. The animal stolen was the gelding bought of Messrs. Brooks and Bisette of this place and shipped hence by the purchaser, G. W. Fenn, last Friday morning, to Hartford. It is said that several men saw the unloading of the animal, but they naturally supposed the man had a right to do it, and so they said and did nothing.
